GREAT FLOATING CRANE NOW BEING BUILT FOR PEARL HARBOR TO BE LARGEST IN WORLD

THE FLOATING CRANE AT MARE ISLAND, SLIGHTLY SMALLER THAN THE ONE AT PEARL HARBOR.

One of the most interesting pieces of machinery construction or assembling ever seen here is now in progress at the navy dock, where the giant floating crane, the largest in the world, which is destined for service at Pearl Harbor, is being erected on the pontoon which recently arrived here in tow of the tug Hercules. The job is a big one, and it will be several months yet before the completed crane will be ready for business. The crane, which was turned out by the Wellman-Seaver-Morgan Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, and which is being assembled under the direction of that company's engineering representative, Mr. Case, will be the largest in the world when completed. It will have a lifting capacity of 150 tons, and the contract price totals $334,000. The pontoon, on which the superstructure is being erected, was built by the Union Iron Works, and is in itself a giant affair, incidentally proving one of the most unwieldy tows that was ever brought from the Coast to Honolulu. It is to be fitted with Diesel oil engines, which will drive the dynamo which supplies the current for the hoisting machinery. These engines are of the latest type, and have been used with great success on similar machinery. In the event of anything going wrong with the generating machinery, however, the crane will be fitted with the very latest model Edison storage battery, capable of holding enough "juice" to run the crane for seven hours. These storage cells are a great improvement on the old model, costing just twice as much but being more than twice as efficient. The picture above shows a floating crane built by the same company for the Bremerton navy yard, which is just a trifle smaller than the one designed for Pearl Harbor. It is working on one of the armored cruisers of the Maryland type, which gives a good idea of its immensity.

SALAMANCA HUNTS HIS PAY AS BAND MEMBER

Lazaro Salamanca, veteran member of the Hawaiian band, arrived in Honolulu by the Siberia yesterday after a visit to his old home in the Philippines to enter upon a course of troubles.

Salamanca appeared bright and early at the city hall today to collect what he thought was money owing to him from the municipality. He said he had four months' salary due, and Auditor Bicknell was enlisted in the search for the missing pay. The auditor couldn't find out what Salamanca's status was, so he appealed to the municipal encyclopedia of information, commonly known as Bert Rivenburgh, secretary to the mayor. Rivenburgh overhauled his mental card index and brought up a statement that Salamanca was given four months' leave of absence on half-pay, or two months' pay in all. Lazaro seemed to have figured that he had the full time coming and when last seen was still on the hunt for his musical rights. Salamanca has been a member of the band for more than twenty years and recently decided to take a leave of absence to visit his former home in the Philippines.

BEER AND FOOD COST HUNDRED

Ah Tai, a Chinese caterer and restaurant proprietor, doing business on the windward side of Oahu, can readily testify to the high cost of living, following his timely contribution to city and county coffers this morning.

Feeding the residents of the flourishing cannery settlement at eighteen dollars a month and furnishing a plentiful supply of a brew claimed to be suited to the climate, may have proved a prosperous financial undertaking upon the part of the proprietor, but he failed to take into consideration that the Territorial officials should have been consulted upon the matter. Charged with selling liquor without first having secured a license to dispense the same, Ah Tai was placed under arrest by Special License Inspector Fennell.

The Chinese put up an even hundred dollars to insure his appearance at district court this morning, but for some reason or other he failed to show up when the names of offenders against municipal laws were called.

When the third and last note sounded by Clerk Weed died away and no Ah Tai materialized, Judge Larnach ordered the bail forfeited. Fennell claims that the Chinese was doing a land office business in the vending of spirituous liquors at his place of refreshment near the Libby, McNeil & Libby pineapple cannery. When placed in custody the Chinese declared that he had agreed to serve meals with the nut-brown attachment, and in order to fulfill his contracts with his customers was obliged to provide beer in order to make good.

Sue Tuk Yuen, a Chinese with four bullet wounds alleged to be inflicted by Ah Hoon, a former partner in business, is reported as well on the road to recovery. Monday it was believed that the man would die, as two shots from a revolver had pierced his lung. Ah Hoon, the man charged with the assault, is said to have made an ineffectual attempt upon his life while in the city and county jail. He made a desperate attempt to hang himself, but his plans at self destruction were frustrated.

Chief of Detectives McDuffie states that the value of two horses alleged to have been stolen by Elia Long, would total about $200. Long awaits action at the hands of the lower court. He is charged with larceny. The animals were recovered by McDuffie after they had been taken from the premises of a Chinese in Manoa Valley.
